The Singapore Airshow 2018 (6-11 February) concluded its trade segment on an optimistic note with strong commendations of “the wide range of extensive opportunities to connect stakeholders, disruptive technologies to drive change and unique interaction platforms to shape the future.” The show saw an over 10 percent increase in trade visitors, as well as 287 VIP delegations with over 70 percent of exhibitors committing to return to the Singapore Airshow 2020! “The biennial Singapore Airshow plays a vital role in supporting the aviation ecosystem in Singapore and Asia Pacific upon which so many skilled jobs depend. It’s the place for current and potential customers and suppliers to meet, network, do business and evaluate new opportunities together. It’s also a great showcase for new technologies and important to encourage the next generation of aviation talent to seek employment in aviation. By focusing on next generation technologies, encouraging start-ups to exhibit for the first time and promoting the capabilities and offerings around Southeast Asia and beyond, the show provides a time-efficient way to develop new business,” stated Richard Brown, Principal, ICF International.
